What Are Some Different Types Of Selection?

1. Explain the difference between stabilizing, directional and disruptive selection and give an example of each.

2. Be able to recognize each above type of selection from the change in a graph of phenotype vs. frequency of individuals (draw each graph to show how it changes from the graph of normal distribution).

3. Explain how sexual selection can lead to dimorphism within a species.