

Guidelines for Use of the Principles of Universal Design

January 29, 1999 / Revised September 9, 2002

The Principles of Universal Design were developed by The Center for Universal Design in collaboration with a consortium of universal design researchers and practitioners from across the United States. Funding for the project was provided by the U.S. Department of Education's National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research.

Others are welcome to reproduce the Principles, with the following restrictions.

1. The Principles of Universal Design must be printed intact, without interpretation or abbreviation or any other alteration. It is acceptable to reprint the Principles of Universal Design in one of two formats: either ALL of the seven Principles alone, or ALL of the seven Principles with ALL of the 29 associated guidelines.
2. The Principles of Universal Design must be clearly labeled, "Copyright © 1997 NC State University, The Center for Universal Design."
3. The Principles of Universal Design should be cited as follows: "The Center for Universal Design (1997). The Principles of Universal Design, Version 2.0. Raleigh, NC: North Carolina State University."
4. Whenever feasible, all ten authors of the Principles of Universal Design should be listed.
5. If the Principles of Universal Design are being used as the basis for other work, it must be made clear that The Center for Universal Design is responsible only for the Principles themselves and not other work developed from them. We suggest the following disclaimer:

"The Principles of Universal Design were conceived and developed by The Center for Universal Design at North Carolina State University. Use or application of the Principles in any form by an individual or organization is separate and distinct from the Principles and does not constitute or imply acceptance or endorsement by The Center for Universal Design of the use or application."
